Bologna selected to host the European Physical Society Conference on Nuclear Physics in 2018

By Nicola Bianchi. Published on 23 June 2016 in: August 2017, Events, June 2016, 2018, EPS NPD, EuNPC, Nuclear Physics

One of the main activities of the board of the EPS Nuclear Physics Division is to organise the European Nuclear Physics Conference, which is an EPS Divisional Conference and one of the major international conferences that reviews the field of nuclear physics every third year.

The first three Conferences were held in Bochum, DE (2009, 2012, 2015) and all attended by several hundred participants from most European countries.

For the next Conference, six different applications were received. The first meeting that was held in Orsay, FR on April 18th and 19th. After a long process, finally the application of Bologna was chosen as the best. The proposed venue is the "S. Domenico" center in Bologna, Italy. The conference will be organized by Italian Universities and Institutions and particular attention will be given to the participation of students and young researchers.

More information will soon be available at <http://www.eu-npc.org>
