

Aina CROSAS

My name is Aina Crosas and I'm 23 years old. Science has been one of my passions since I was a kid, and that's the reason why I decided to take a degree in Biomedical Sciences. After working for some months in a lab, I felt that wasn't what I wanted to do in the future and I started to investigate other options. That was when I discovered a Master in Scientific, Medical and Environmental Communication and immediately decided to enroll. And that was the best decision I could have done! Since then, I've been dedicating to scientific outreach. During the master, I had the opportunity to do an internship in TV3, the public television of Catalunya, in a program called "Quèquicom", which tries to make scientific concepts understandable for the lay public.

Since October 2018, I have been working in the Studies Center on Science, Communication and Society as a communication officer and community manager. I also worked for the cancer campaign La Marató 2018, giving talks about what cancer is and how to approach it.

I'm really interested in audiovisual language, and that's why I'm attending a course in video editing. I have also attended some other training courses, such as "Evaluation of scientific outreach activities impact", or the Congress "VII Jornada Ciencia en Redes". I speak Catalan (my mother tongue), Spanish and English. I'm also studying German at the moment.
