

Alessandro MACCIO'

I was born in Clusone (Bergamo) on Sept. 17th 1985 and I live in Padua.

Publicist journalist since Dec. 5th 2007 and professional journalist since June 18th 2015, graduated with honors in Literature (Modern Philology) at University of Padua on February 2nd 2011, I have worked and currently work for many newspapers as Corriere del Veneto (2011-currently), Uninews24.it (2013-2014) and Venetoeconomia.it (2018).

As a journalist of Corriere del Veneto, I write articles about high education, research and innovation, especially researching news from the University of Padua and other universities or scientific organizations of Northern East Italy every week.

Since 2017 I also work for the press agency Ansa as a reporter from Padua. Furthermore, on 2017 and 2018 I worked twice as a press officer of DIGITALmeet, the biggest Italian festival about digital literacy.

On 2017 I published the book “First to see them. The gravitational waves, the revelation of the century and the researchers of the group INFN Padova-Trento” (“Primi a vederle. Le onde gravitazionali, la scoperta del secolo e i ricercatori del gruppo INFN Padova-Trento”, Padova University Press).
