

Marta SEROR GARCIA

 A portrait of Marta Seror Garcia, a woman with long, curly brown hair, wearing a teal button-down shirt. She is smiling slightly and looking towards the camera. The background is a light-colored wall with logos for the Institute of Physics of Cantabria (IFCA) and the University of Cantabria (UC).	Hi! My name is Marta and I am the outreach coordinator at the Institute of Physics of Cantabria (Spain). I studied Astrophysics in Madrid. Afterwards I got interested in science education and communication, and in the skills needed to bring science closer to the public in an accessible way. Before moving to the North of Spain I worked at the National Science and Technology Museum in Madrid and also as an astroguide in the Canary Islands. I was a Famelab semifinalist (2016), an international scientific monologues contest, and I also participate in science events such as the Pint of Science festival. For three years I have been leading a radio and podcast project that focuses on gender perspective in science. I'm always willing to learn!
