

Barbara PINHO

My name is Barbara, I am currently studying for an MSc in Science Communication at the University of Sheffield and I have a BSc in Biomedical Science.

I chose to study science, but while doing so, something was off.

Even though I enjoyed getting to know molecules, I realized people are far more interesting. That is why I am now focusing my attention on people (while talking about said molecules).

I see myself as a natural communicator, and my current work focuses on communicating in multiple ways: talking, writing, recording and designing. I write about health-related topics and I develop science illustration with Adobe Creative Cloud tools.

I am a Science & Tech Editor at the Forge Press, a student-led newspaper at the University of Sheffield and I write for the LIFE App blog, an app about fasting and healthy lifestyles.

Finally, I am interested in doing research on how the media portrays science-related topics, especially pandemics and antibiotic resistance.