

The future of directional searches

giovedì 11 luglio 2024 09:00 (30 minuti)

I will review the motivation for pursuing the direction-sensitive detection of dark matter, e.g. for confirming the galactic origin of a signal, or for exploring into the neutrino fog. I will then review experimental methods that can perform such measurements across the dark matter model landscape, and highlight recent progress in the field.

Relatore: O'HARE, Ciaran (University of Sydney)

Classifica Sessioni: Plenary