Contribution ID: 311 Type: Oral

Advances of Applied Superconductivity in High Energy Physics

Tuesday, 26 May 2015 17:50 (15 minutes)

Applied superconductivity has been a key and inevitable technology to realize energy-frontier particle accelerators and detectors in high energy physics. We will review the technical advances and future prospects, focusing on superconducting accelerator magnets and RF devices and on large-scale detector magnets. Recent progress in superconducting technology for detecting particles will be briefly introduced.

Primary author: Prof. YAMAMOTO, Akira (KEK and CERN)

Presenter: Prof. YAMAMOTO, Akira (KEK and CERN)

Session Classification: Applied Superconductivity in HEP

Track Classification: S3 - Applied Superconductivity in HEP